Public survey for European Democracy Action plan

Fields marked with * are mandatory.

Introduction

The aim of the European Democracy Action Plan is to ensure that citizens are able to participate in the democratic system through informed decision-making free from interference and manipulation affecting elections and the democratic debate.

The Commission has started the preparation of the European Democracy Action Plan and would like to consult the public on three key themes:
- Election integrity and how to ensure electoral systems are free and fair;
- Strengthening media freedom and media pluralism;
- Tackling disinformation.

In addition, the consultation also covers the crosscutting issue of supporting civil society and active citizenship.

When providing your contribution, you may opt to fill in one or more of the four sections, according to their relevance to your areas of interest. Please note that a specific public consultation on the Digital Services Act package is open until 8 September 2020 and covers also elements relevant in the context of the European Democracy Action Plan.[1]

Questions on election integrity and political advertising

Fair democratic debates and electoral campaigns as well as free and fair elections in all Member States are at the core of our democracies. The space for public debate and electoral campaigns has evolved rapidly and fundamentally, with many activities taking place online. This brings opportunities for the democratic process, public participation and citizen outreach but also challenges, inter alia concerning the transparency of political advertising online and possible threats to the integrity of elections. Ahead of the 2024 European Parliament elections, changes to the role of European political parties might also be considered.

(i) Transparency of political advertising

Q1. Have you ever been targeted[2] with online content that related to political or social issues, political parties (European or national), political programmes, candidates, or ideas within or outside electoral periods ('targeted political content')?

[2] Paid for ads and any form of personalised content promoted to the user

☐ 1. No, never
☐ 2. Yes, once
☑ 3. Yes, several times
☐ 4. I don’t know

Q2. If you receive such targeted political content, are you checking who is behind it, who paid for it and why you are seeing it?

☐ 1. No, I am not interested
☐ 2. I don’t know how to do it
☐ 3. Yes, occasionally
☑ 4. Yes, all the time
☐ 5. I don’t receive targeted political content

Q3. To what extent do you agree with the following statements related to targeted political content you have seen online?

</table>
1. Targeted content was labelled in a clear manner
2. It was easy to distinguish paid for targeted content from organic content
3. It was easy to identify the party or the candidate behind the content
4. The content included information on who paid for it
5. The information provided with the content included targeting criteria
6. The ad was linked to a database of targeted political content
7. The targeted political content offered the possibility to report it to the platform

Please explain

EDIMA members consider that the European Commission should prioritise its policy action in the area of political advertising, outlining measures applicable to all relevant actors, including advertisers, but also political parties and candidates. Member States should be supported in order for them to equip their competent electoral authorities with appropriate means. Coordinated action should be supported too and sanctions imposed, where necessary. We believe it is important to clearly define what constitutes micro-targeting in this context, the policy objectives sought and how the existing legal framework addresses these, prior to evaluating the appropriateness of restrictions to micro-targeting or imposing transparency obligations on advertisers.

Q6. EU countries regulate offline political advertising on traditional media (e.g. press, television) in the context of local, national or EU elections. These rules limit the amount of airtime or maximum expenditure permitted for political advertising on broadcast TV or print media. Do you think similar rules should also apply to online targeted political content?
1. Yes
2. No
3. I don’t know

Please explain your answer

At EU level, Member States follow very different approaches when it comes to offline electoral rules, the level of harmonization is minimal in this field. Such measures are often deeply rooted to the political culture on each of the Member States.

While we are not against specific rules applying in the online world during election periods, we firmly disagree with the idea that similar rules should apply online and offline. These two ecosystems feature very different services, and it is very difficult to compare the exposure of a specific website at any given time to the audience of the evening news broadcast on the main TV channel in a specific country.

At EU level, the Commission should carefully assess on a case by case basis which provisions make sense to apply to the online environment, such as campaign financial rule, and how to best complement measures already taken by online platforms in this space as reported during the months prior to the 2019 European elections.

(ii) Threats to electoral integrity

(iv) European Elections

Q1. In your opinion what initiatives at national level could strengthen monitoring and enforcement of electoral rules and support the integrity of European elections (multiple selections possible)?

- 1. Strengthened sharing of information and monitoring activity across borders and between authorities
- 2. Technical interfaces to display all political advertisements as defined by online service providers
- 3. Technical interfaces to display all advertisements (political or not)
- 4. Clear rules for delivery of political ads online in electoral periods, similarly to those that exist in traditional media (TV, radio and press)
- 5. Independent oversight bodies with powers to investigate reported irregularities
- 6. Enhanced reporting obligations (e.g. to national electoral management bodies) on advertisers in a campaign period
- 7. Enhanced transparency of measures taken by online platforms in the context of elections, as well as meaningful transparency of algorithmic systems involved in the recommendation of content
- 8. Privacy-compliant access to platform data for researchers to better understand the impact of the online advertisement ecosystem on the integrity of democratic processes
- 9. Greater convergence of certain national provisions during European elections
- 10. Stronger protection against cyber attacks
- 11. Higher sanctions for breaches of the electoral rules
- 12. Other – please specify

Please explain your answer
The statements above are quite broad and make it difficult for us to provide accurate feedback. However, we want to emphasise that protecting democratic elections from disinformation is a joint effort which cannot be successful if only one or just a few of the stakeholders get involved. Roles and responsibilities need to be shared among a wide group of stakeholders – governments, electoral bodies and regulators, campaigners, political parties, online platforms, traditional media as well as watchdogs and users. Being at national or at EU level, fostering the dialogue and coordinating the efforts of all of these stakeholders will go a long way in enforcing electoral rules and fighting against disinformation.

On a stronger protection against cyber-attacks: We continue to encourage candidates, parties, and politicians to further adopt security features to their online services, for example, two factor authentication. These simple measures are significantly important, both during an election and outside of one, as they provide greater protection and security to information that could otherwise be harmful.

Greater cooperation across Member States during EU elections is crucial, and so is easily accessible and timely information regarding candidates and parties.

We would encourage further initiatives at both national and regional level to improve election integrity across candidates and parties, for example during the EU elections the Elections Pledge from Alliance of Democracies https://electionpledge.org/, and during the Irish elections the Fair Play Pledge from The Irish Council for Civil Liberties, Transparency International Ireland and DCU FuJo https://fairplaypledge.org/.

Q2. In your opinion what initiatives at European level could strengthen monitoring and enforcement of rules relevant to the electoral context?

- 1. Strengthened sharing of information and monitoring activity across borders and between authorities
- 2. European-level obligations on political advertising service providers
- 3. European-level shared online monitoring and analysis capability being made appropriately available to national authorities
- 4. Cross border recognition of certain national provisions
- 5. Other

Questions on strengthening media freedom and media pluralism

Freedom of expression and freedom and pluralism of the media are enshrined in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (Article 11), and their protection is underpinned by Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights. They are essential elements of a healthy democratic system. Whilst in general the EU and its Member States score well on a global scale, there are signs of deterioration (as shown by the Media Pluralism Monitor) and the sector is facing challenges from threats to the safety of journalists (including strategic lawsuits against public participation – ‘SLAPP lawsuits’) to the transformation of the sector, with digital technologies and new players transforming the established business model of advertising revenue. The COVID-19 pandemic has worsened the situation, both in the EU and outside of the EU, from restrictive national legislation to critical loss of revenues for the media sector.

Initiatives to strengthen media freedom and media pluralism will build in particular on the analysis and areas covered by the upcoming Rule of Law Report, with a focus on improving the protection of journalists, their rights and working conditions. Please note that the Commission also intends to propose, by the end of the year, an Action Plan for the Media and Audiovisual sector to further support the digital transformation and the competitiveness of the media and audiovisual sectors and to stimulate access to quality content and media pluralism.

4. News media, in particular public broadcasters, provide balanced and representative information, presenting different views, particularly in times of electoral campaigns

Q2. How important is the support for independent journalism (including free lance journalists and bloggers/web journalists) and the protection of the safety of independent journalists to supporting democracy in the EU and internationally?

- 1. Yes (please explain)
- 2. No (please explain)

Q6. Do you think information from independent media and trustworthy sources should be promoted on online intermediary services (such as search engines, social media, and aggregators)?

☐ 1. Yes (please explain)

☐ 2. If yes, please give examples of how it could be achieved and how to distinguish sources to be promoted?

☑ 3. No (please explain)

☐ 4. I do not know

Please explain

Online platforms play an important role in fostering media pluralism and promoting user engagement. However, the systematic promotion of “independent media and trustworthy sources” raises important questions, such as who will rule that a source is indeed trustworthy, and based on which criteria?

Q7. Do you think further laws or institutions should be put in place in your country to strengthen media independence and transparency in any of the following areas?

☑ 1. Transparency of state advertising and state support to news media / journalism – Yes/No

☑ 2. Transparency of media ownership – Yes/No

☐ 3. Promotion of information from independent media and trustworthy sources – Yes/No

☐ 4. Ownership limitations of commercial actors – Yes/No

☐ 5. Ownership limitations of political actors – Yes/No

☐ 6. Rules to prevent foreign (extra-EU) based manipulative and hate-spreading websites from operating in the EU - Yes/No

☐ 7. Other – please specify

☐ 8. No, what is in place is sufficient

☐ 9. No

☐ 10. I do not know

Please explain your answer
In reality, it may be difficult to address some of the above-mentioned areas. For example, it might be almost impossible to determine whether a website is operated by foreign or by domestic actors. Rules that would require certainty on attribution would be difficult to enforce for public and private actors alike.

Q8. Do you think that the EU should act to strengthen media independence and transparency in any of the following areas? (Multiple answers possible)

☐ 1. Transparency of state advertising and state support to news media / journalism – Yes/No

Q9. If you answered yes to some of the options of the previous question, how should the EU act in these areas?

☐ 1. By issuing guidance – Yes/No
☐ 2. By setting up dedicated structured dialogue with Member States – Yes/No
☐ 3. By providing financial support – Yes/No
☐ 4. By adopting legislation – Yes/No
☐ 5. Other – please specify
Q10. EU countries have rules applying to media content such as news or current affairs, in general (e.g. rules on editorial independence, objectivity/impartiality), and in particular during elections (rules on scheduling and the balance of the programmes, moratoria on political campaign activity, opinion polls). Do you think similar rules should apply online?

☐ 1. Yes
☒ 2. No
☐ 3. I don’t know

Please explain your reply.

Each online platform is different and takes a variety of actions to fight disinformation. Blanket rules will not help as they will apply to a multitude of different services. As a result, we believe that transparency is pivotal in addressing the common objective of ensuring free and fair election in the EU and beyond, but we would caution against attempts to harmonise processes in ways that would not allow the needed flexibility for companies.

It is not possible to distinguish between different schedules and time slots in the online space as it is in the offline space, so this requirement would essentially amount to a general monitoring obligation in contradiction to Art 15 of the e-commerce Directive.

Q11. Should the role of and cooperation between EU media regulators in overseeing respect for such standards, offline and online, be reinforced?

☒ 1. Yes
☐ 2. No
☐ 3. I don’t know

Please explain your reply.

(iii) Cross-border cooperation, media and press councils, self-regulation

Q1. Are you aware of the existence of a press or media council or another media self/co-regulation body supervising journalistic ethical standards and conduct in your country?

☐ 1. Yes
☒ 2. No
Q1.1 If yes, what are the main activities of a press or media council or another media self/co-regulation body in your country?

- 1. Please specify
- 2. I do not know

Please explain your answer

Q1.2 Do you think press or media councils should be established in all EU countries?

- 1. Yes (please explain)
- 2. No (please explain)

Q1.3 In order to address the challenges in the media sector, which activities should be prioritised by press and media councils or other media self/co-regulation bodies?

- 1. Incentivising exchanges of best practices and promoting journalistic standards, in particular online – Yes/No
- 2. Providing support for journalists in the process of digitalisation of media sector – Yes/No
- 3. Ensuring effective complaints handling mechanisms – Yes/No
- 4. Establishing links between journalists and citizens to increase trust – Yes/No
- 5. Contributing to the fight against disinformation online – Yes/No
- 6. Other - please specify

Please explain your answer

Q2. What role, if any, should the EU play to facilitate cross-border cooperation?

- 1. Provide financial support to media councils or other media self/co-regulation bodies – Yes/No
- 2. Set up an EU-level coordination network – Yes/No
3. Promote citizens’ awareness about their activities – Yes/No
4. Other (please specify)
5. No role

Questions on tackling disinformation

Designed to intentionally deceive citizens and manipulate our information space, disinformation undermines the ability of citizens to form informed opinions. Disinformation can also be a tool for manipulative interference by external actors.

(i) Scope

Q1. The April 2018 Commission Communication on Tackling online disinformation: a European Approach defines disinformation as verifiably false or misleading information that is created, presented and disseminated for economic gain or to intentionally deceive the public, and may cause public harm.[4]

Do you think this definition should be broadened and complemented to distinguish between different aspects of the problem?

[4] Public harm includes threats to democratic processes as well as to public goods such as Union citizens' health, environment or security. Disinformation does not include inadvertent errors, satire and parody, or clearly identified partisan news and commentary.

1. Yes (please specify)
2. No (please specify)
3. Don’t know

Please explain your answer

We agree that inadvertent errors, satire and parody, or clearly identified partisan news and commentary should definitely not be considered disinformation

On the issue of definitions related to disinformation, we believe that the EDAP presents a unique opportunity to clarify what is misinformation, harmful misinformation and disinformation, and how these concepts are linked. It will allow European institutions to better grasp the measures needed to address these related but distinct concepts.
Q2. So far, the European Commission has addressed the spread of disinformation through a self-regulatory approach, which has resulted in a Code of Practice on Disinformation being subscribed by major online platforms and trade associations representing the advertising industry. Do you think that this approach should be:[5]

[5] This question complements the questionnaire for the public consultation on the Digital Services Act, which focuses on illegal content

- 1. Continued as it is currently pursued (status quo)
- 2. Pursued but enlarged to a wider range of signatories
- 3. Pursued but combined with a permanent monitoring and reporting programme
- 4. Pursued but on the basis of a substantially reviewed Code of Practice
- 5. Pursued but accompanied by a regulatory framework fixing basic requirements for content moderation, data access and transparency, as well as respective oversight mechanisms
- 6. Pursued but accompanied by a regulatory package fixing overarching principles applicable to all information society services and establishing more detailed rules for dealing with disinformation under such general principles
- 7. Replaced by special regulation on disinformation
- 8. abandoned altogether, as all forms of restriction or control on content posted online by internet users and which is not illegal in nature (e.g. illegal hate speech, incitement to terrorism) could endanger freedom of speech
- 9. Other (please explain)

The code of practice is a tool that has achieved a great deal to-date, especially in the context of the EU elections and COVID-19. The Code itself thought needs to continue to evolve based on experience and for it to truly be able to tackle disinformation should also include signatories from the media sector to ensure that there is a form of collaboration and a commitment for the various sectors to jointly tackle disinformation. The Code should take a more inclusive approach that embodies the entire news ecosystem, including advertisers, smaller online services, blogs, hosting platforms, press, journalists, media, researchers, and even political groups, who are a few of the parties that both contribute to the creation and dissemination of information.

Any updates to the Code or new initiatives should be technology-neutral, not based on a single service, business model, or company, and should be more inclusive of experts and civil society organisations to present a better understanding of emerging threats.

We would also like to underline the need for consistency and coherence among different but coexisting EU policy instruments and proposals that address many of the same policy objectives and challenges, but from slightly different angles; to name a few the Digital Services Act, AVMSD, EC Action Plan on Disinformation and EC Communication to tackle COVID-19…

This question takes a very narrow view of the measures taken to address disinformation by focusing on one, or a few services. This should not discount that there are many different types of services which take measures to tackle disinformation based on the nature of the service and how it is used by the users – e.g. limitations on message forwarding.

(ii) Disrupting the economic drivers for disinformation
Q1. What type of measures should online platforms and advertising networks operators take in order to demonetise websites that create, present or disseminate disinformation?

[6] Please note that this question refers to monetisation of websites that systematically publish false or misleading information, which is not illegal in nature. Monetisation via advertisement placements of web sites publishing illegal content is addressed within the context of a separate questionnaire for the public consultation on the Digital Services Act.

Questions on supporting civil society and active citizenship

As a crosscutting issue, civil society faces increasing pressure, but plays a key role in the democratic system, holding those in power to account and stimulating public debate and citizen engagement, as well as in combatting some of the identified threats. In addition to this, participatory and deliberative democracy gives citizens a chance to actively and directly participate in the shaping of planned or future public policies. A major element in the context will be the upcoming Conference on the Future of Europe.

Q1. Do you think civil society is sufficiently involved in shaping EU policies, notably through consultation?

1. Yes
2. No
3. Don’t know

If Q1=2 What more could be done?

Civil society could, for example, play an active role in the Code of Practice on Disinformation.

Q2. Do you think civil society should be more involved in concrete EU-level actions to promote democratic debate?
